WEATHER FOLK-LORE.
The curious "Handbook of Weather

...," which has lately been given to the world by the Rev. C. Swainson, suggests so much that is interesting, not only to the meteorologist or the comparative mythologist, but the latter will find much for his purpose in the words of the historian of former days, and the students of the earth's changes. Popular sayings and rhymes have been collected from all parts of Europe, and have been carefully arranged under the months and the days of the months to which they refer.

"The weather is fair and bright," "February diths out at and sheets," is true, but then, "All the months of the year: course a fair February," and

"February dith ditch,
Black or white (rain or snow) don't care which;
With be white,
It's the better to like."

Caemlunda day, the second of the month, words by its weather an omen for the rest of the winter.

"If it is fair and bright,
The winter will be a long and bright."

But if it be dark, with clouds and rain, Winter is gone, and won't come again."

the same odour runs through France and Germany, where it is held that the bear, the badger, and the fox wake up on that day, and if they see the sun shining return again to their lairs, since they know the winter is at an end. "March dust" was as welcome in old days as now—

"A March without water Drowns the hind's daughter,"

"March rain spoils more than elches,"

"e, "came in like a lion" long ago.

First comes David (March 1), then comes Chad (2nd), and then comes Winold (3rd) as though he were mid."

ce with the "going out" of March "like lamb." "April weather, rain and sunshine

"lie together," is the best for the land.
 Pluie d'Avril raut la char de David" is a French saying; and our
 "In April Drove's flood is worth a king's good," means the same. The "merry month of May" has, and always had, its doubtful east winds, so
 "Gust not a doubt Till May be out."
 "Who duffs his coat on a winter's day,
 Will gladly put it on in May."
 The third of the month, the "Invention of St. Holy Cross," is ominous, and the Yorkshire proverb is thus:
 "May be the luck's born on Holyrood morn,
 But worth a king's crown is the shorn;
 But if we be seen ere, Holyrood's o'ne,
 Bad harvest is foretold."
 On the Rhine very cold weather is looked about the middle of May; and St. Pancras, St. Servatius, and St. Boniface, whose festivals fall on the 11th, 12th, and 13th, are called the "Isomen" (der Isomenner), about Midsummer various countries of northern Europe have their many saints, so, as in the case of our St. Swithin, may be taken the place of some heathen "water-gods." In Germany the Seven Sleepers (27) rub the weather for the next 40 years. "St. Bartholomew (August 24) brings the cold dew," and St. Matthew (September 21) warns to "get candlesticks new,"

"St. Luke's little summer" begins on his

On St. Luke's day,
The ocean may play."
The sharp November weather is not desirable; it thrusts a mild winter:
(There is in November that will bear a deck,
And nothing else but the sun and moon.)
St. Martin's day, 11th arrives somewhat in his white horse (and snow), and the cold and have set in fully by Christmas:
"A green Christmas make it cheerful."
Certain days have always been regarded as presaging the weather for some time afterwards, and some of them for the whole year. Thus, if New Year's Day fall on Monday, there will be "a winter somewhat uncomfortable, summer temperate, no plentiful fruits, many fancies and fables opened,
the stall reapers, kings and many others
will be made to be in winter, plagues, a common fall of gentlemen, the great plagues of "day fatality" was extended by into other quarters. Thunder on Sunday, for example, "should bring the death of the married men, judges, and others; Monday's thunder the death of women; Tuesday's thunder plenty of grain; Wednesday's thunder plenty of clothes and other bloodshed;
Thursday's thunder plenty of ships and corn;
Friday's thunder the slaughter of the great men, and other horrible murders; Saturday's thunder, a general pestilential plague and death." But such speculations as must have been confined to the learned, the popular "Winter's thunder a sum-

1 winter followed by a bad summer, are other fragments of weather folklore scarcely more intelligible, but very widespread. "Sapera" is strictly except in inland, unless the pillars of marriage clouds which the fair sex are then supposed to have is soon to be regarded. Elsewhere it is always bissexile, anno inferali, and bissexi, o. a. mama, o. l. bambi — either mother or the child will die when a birth anniversary in leap-year. Why "anno de pace de miens", or "anno lungeo (a. de muelboom), anno tribolato," is by no means clear.

Referring relating to the sun and the moon as might be expected, very numerous—

"A red sky at the morning,
Is the shepherd's warning;
A red sky at night
Is the shepherd's delight!"

— "morgensroth" foretells rain, but "de sera bel temp so apera," as the saying is. The change of the moon on the day of the wedding was held to be significant; and "a Saturday moon" if it will, it comes too soon. The rain-fall with its many names—is Catalonia, Martin's Bow; in Lorraine, "St. Martin's Belt;" or "St. Bernard's Crown," in Bavaria. "The Sun's Ring" is Croatia, "the Cow's Seat;" and in Carniola, "The Red Cow"—is of course full of warnings. The clouds, by their varying shapes, and floating about the hill tops here, given rise to sayings in almost every district. "The ship is up" is the Cleveland saying for certain long clouds in the form of arcs set at themselves; and according to their inclination indicate rain or fair weather. "The ship is up," it may be remarked, is well known in the Würed district of Sweden to be his name. "No-speak" is held to be the corruption of "Oden-skeppet." Oden is a sun ship of gold, and the heathen belief was that it was the sun which sailed the sky. The expression in North Yorkshire, where the northmen, who settled there, as colonists, have left so many animals and birds have their rhymes for their owners—in short, "weather folk," seems to have been always the same, and as a consequence climate can have been but little.
